Memorial Trees

Living Tributes

The University of Texas at Austin

The University of Texas at Austin welcomes the purchase of trees to provide living tributes to individuals or groups associated with the university. Planting of trees by individuals or organizations is facilitated through the Memorial Tree Program administered by the university urban forester and the Landscape Services section of Facilities Services.

Individuals and groups may initiate the memorial tree process by submitting the application on the back of this flyer. Applicants may request specific locations and species. Spacing requirements, irrigation, future university improvements and utilities may affect the final tree selection and location. The university forester reviews each request and communicates with the donor to ensure acceptable results.

When finalizing a tree location, the university practices due diligence in investigating future university growth, planning and infrastructure maintenance. However, the university reserves the right to remove or relocate trees in an unforeseen circumstance. If a tree cannot be relocated due to restrictions such as size, the tree will be removed and replaced with a new one.

A certificate suitable for framing can be sent to the purchaser or honoree. Plaques or other displays are not permitted at the tree. An interactive map available online allows viewers to see locations and details of all memorial trees, making it easier for the families and university community to share these living tributes.

The cost for each memorial tree is $500 and includes procurement and installation of a two-inch caliper (30 gallon) tree by the urban forester and Landscape Services staff. A planting and dedication ceremony can be provided by request during work hours.

The university procures and plants trees in the appropriate season. During the establishment period (about three years), staff closely inspect, monitor and maintain the trees, replacing any that are damaged or dead. Over time, trees are transitioned and attended to in accordance with current campus practices and standards.
